

One-day Workshop with
Christopher Houghton Budd

21st June 2009
Rudolf Steiner House
London

Christopher Houghton Budd, an economic historian with a doctorate in banking and international finance, has had a life-long interest in bridging between Rudolf Steiner's work and current economic thinking.

Cost:
£25 (excl. meals)

Registration:
Please advise if you plan to attend

Contact:
Christopher Houghton Budd
01227 738207
chb@christopherhoughtonbudd.com

Mysterious Money

Between the fading past and the dawning future
An exploration of Rudolf Steiner's relationship to modern economic life

9:30 – 10:00

Money and the New Mysteries

Money is usually understood as a dry, technical affair; yet its origins are sacred. To this day, money links the inner and outer life of the human being, a characteristic which in our times needs to be placed in the foreground, not only so that monetary affairs can become 'soul size', but also so that the world of finance can be mastered by everyone.

11:00 – 12:30

Three Kinds of Money / Money as Accounting

With such ideas, Rudolf Steiner sought to make sense of today's economic developments. But how relevant are they to current circumstances?

13:30 – 15:30

Financial Markets Aspirations or Gambling?

Are the financial markets all bad? Could they in fact not exist? Or is the question to understand their deeper meaning and to link them to Rudolf Steiner's concepts of gift money?

16:00 – 18:00

The View from the City

What part does the City of London play in world economic affairs? And to what extent can Steiner's work approach figure in the mix?