

Rudolf Steiner

Economist of Tomorrow

Known mainly in this country for his work in education, Rudolf Steiner also made an important contribution to modern economics. In these seminars some of Steiner's key thoughts will be explored against the background of today's events.

6.30 PM Thursdays

London School of Economics

Room D6, Ground Floor, Clement House, Aldwych

January 17th

Beyond the Market

Collaboration without collusion

February 14th

The Division of Labour

Abstract idea or celebration of human diversity?

March 13th

Three Kinds of Money

The future of monetary policy?

Each session will begin with a focusing contribution as the basis for a free ranging discussion by the participants.

Attendance charge: £5 (Students free)

Convenors: Dr. Christopher Houghton Budd, Arthur Edwards

Sponsored by the Centre for Associative Economics (cfae.biz)